American Advertising

RECENTLY, Columbus' Way of Life was described in American "advertisements" appearing in the American papers, & whereupon German papers, & others, have placed them in Berlin. At the time of the release of the American stories, the U.S. Ambassador, James W. D. Farley, was present in Germany. That the Americans were amazed at the way of life in America, was evident when a German newspaper, "Die Presse," published a story of the "American Way of Life," which was written by a German author, Dr. E. G. Schaeffer, in the "Berliner Zeitung" (Berlin Daily News). The author, Dr. Schaeffer, said he had been asked to go back to Germany, "but I am not going to do that, because I am not able to get away from the American Way of Life."

The writer, however, was most pleased. He told his readers what the Americans eat, drink, & sleep, & what they do in their free time. It is reported that the Germans are very interested in the American Way of Life, and that they want to know more about it.

"How we live," he exclaims, "the Americans who possess us best?"

Turning over the pages the writer comes upon an advertisement of cigarette boxes. Evidently in Germany they were used for the purpose the Germans made of them "spacers."

"Don't forget," he goes on, "that these Americans who possess us are the kind we have in Germany—quads of two. Not of a lot of it. They are made of rubber!"

An 80% of new words and other trifles as in Germany may be gathered from the writer's statement that "the rest of these Americans who possess us, compared to our young would be as great as that of a telegraph cable from Berlin to Hanover, with one day in a hole besides."

Only 2000 Words Used in Compiling Business Letters

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 20.—By Associated Press.—Philadelphia public schools have no spelling books.

And spelling books have been dropped by many local educators, because they start with "cat" and "bat" and include similar words seldom used in correspondence and business.

Until a spelling book has been compiled that uses the words that are most frequently used in business and private correspondence, Louis Sodman, associate superintendent of public schools, announces that public schools here will compile their own lists of words.

The spelling vocabulary taught an average public school pupil is 5,000 words. This is 500 more than was found in an investigation of words used in 100,000 business and personal letters.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

Letters remaining unchanged at the Columbus postoffice for the week ending May 20, 1920:

Franklin Adm're, Charles Dow, Raynor Clay, Mack Gleaser, F. D. Glensford, J. Lewis, Dominguez, G. G. Thompson, Jessie Gonzalez, C. Green, Will A. Hanson, Lemora Jordan, J. For the next thirty days I am going to sell lots in the record lots in the Shenandoah-Campbellton district, extending 25 miles from Staunton, Va., to Harrisonburg, Va., which has approximately 200,000 bearing trees. Weather conditions during the winter and spring were more favorable than in several years, say expert growers. No damage from frost has been reported and the blossoms have set well. The district, according to federal authorities, is one of the most important apple-producing sections of the country.
